There are many grafting techniques and materials available for the implant surgeon. It is important to understand the defect anatomy, our regenerative goals, and our skill set in order to choose which technique will be most predictable for each case.

Learning Objectives & Aims

- To understand how we have to manage it to minimize bone resorption, which is the biggest fear for oral surgeons.

- To familiarize with soft tissue augmentation procedures and to understand when and how they have to be applied along with bone grafting.
